

First Wilderness Heritage Corridor

HADLEY/LAKE LUZERNE

Hadley/Lake Luzerne's Link to the First Wilderness

This node can be characterized by the influence of water resources. The towns of Hadley and Lake Luzerne sit at the confluence of the Sacandaga and the Hudson Rivers thus providing these communities with a diversity of water-related recreation, including rafting, tubing, kayaking, canoeing, power boating, and swimming. There are outdoor recreation businesses that currently have operations along both rivers and each community has, over the past few years, developed a trail system along the shoreline. In addition to whitewater rafting, there are flatwater recreation opportunities where canoes and powerboats can travel between Lake Luzerne and Corinth thus linking to the southern node in the study area.

Plan elements include coordinated community enhancement and market positioning strategies, including Streetscape improvements and infill to create pedestrian connections between the new train station and the Four Corners. Waterfront amenities will also be provided, including proposed restoration of the Bow Bridge, Canoe/Kayak access points and pedestrian access to Rockwell Falls.
